Ocupar el TRONO

La perspectiva, la distorsión y las múltiples miradas. Atelier Avéus* explora conceptos que traduce en muebles esculturales, simbólicos y estéticos.

Yo diría que mi trabajo es narrativo porque el punto de partida siempre es una idea que se traduce en muebles: el simbolismo, el supratismo o la espera son algunos de los temas que he explorado", comienza Morgane Roux, francesa y de 27 años, a quien descubrimos en el último Salone milanés con su instalación The Symbolic Room. La diseñadora había creado, con su marca Atelier Avéus, un interior-santuario lleno de arquetipos: la silla se convertía en trono, la mesa en altar, el jarrón en caliz. Tras haber estudiado Arquitectura en París y Diseño de Producto en Milán (las dos disciplinas se respiran en sus obras), y vivir en São Paulo y Lisboa, ahora reside en Londres. Sus creaciones se mueven entre el diseño y el arte, son piezas conceptuales, filosóficas y esculturales, volúmenes fuertes y elegantes que lanza por colecciones. "Aspiro a mostrar algo más que objetos funcionales, quiero que desencadenen algo más profundo y sensible, como un estado de ánimo o una atmósfera específicos. Deberían contar una historia e impactar emocionalmente también", prosigue. Entre sus referencias, además de Mario Botta, sobre quien escribió su tesis, nombres tan dispares como Escher, Jim Jarmusch, Hopper o John Register. Una chica con concepto. AVEUUS.COM @ FORKOCIOLET
